The World's Washington special correspondent says: Advice received here to-day from Rielgo, N. C., state a conference between Sherman and Johnston took place at Chapel Hill, fifteen miles west of Raleigh. Johnston's army, composed of about 20,000 men, including Hampton's and Wheeler's interview Breckinridge, the rebel Secretary of War, was present. He participated in drawing up the already published memoranda on the terms of capitulation. During his conversation he freely admitted the failure of the rebellion.

Well, and declared peace was almost at hand, and, in alluding to the Constitution, and, said it was directly the legal abolishing slavery. He predicted its ratification by more than two-thirds of the States.
It was understood that during this conference, which lasted two days, Jeff. Davis

The remains of President Lincoln will arrive at Columbus Saturday. The City Council, city officials, and large numbers of citizens will go up Friday to participate in the ceremonies.

Orders were received yesterday to forward immediately to the front all troops in camps in Ohio and Indiana.

The Herald's correspondent says Major General Halleck issued his official order, giving command at Richmond, as success. General Ord, on last Saturday. General Ord goes to South Carolina to succeed General Gillmore.

Just previous to General Ord's relinquishment of command at Richmond, a circular was issued by his direction, informing these people officers of Lee's army who desired to leave the country, that passports and passes at Halifax, Nova Scotia, would be furnished on application at the office of the Provost Marshal.

New York, April 23.

It is said that the exchange of 5,000 Union soldiers at Darlen, Ga., which, it is supposed, is taken place by this time, will leave scarcely any of our men in the hands of the rebels, while there still remains in the hands of the government from 6,000 to 7,000 rebel troops outside those paroled under terms of Lee's surrender.

The Herald's Washington special correspondent says that Johnson regards it of the most importance that Secretary Seward should

The Tribune's Washington special correspondent says: It is the opinion of well-informed gentlemen, that J. H. Davis will accept to reorganize a force of about 40,000 men in Texas, with which he will move to Mexico, in the event of his being pressed to do so by the Union armies. The Mexican Minister has very largely and, it is said, most important interview with the President to-day. General Ortega has been sent for, and is on his way here from St. Louis, and his arrival is expected, and circumstances imparting additional significance to to-day's audience.

From a gentleman arrived from Havana we learn that a serious, though guarded, apprehension exists there of an insurrection among the slaves. It is said that large deposits of arms have been found and that several negroes have been arrested. The plot is said to raise the slaves all over the island and Government is fearful of an outbreak notwithstanding its premature discovery.

Joseph Shaw, editor of the Westminster Free Press, Democrat, was mobbed on the material of his newspaper establishment destroyed on the night of the murder of President Lincoln, on account of his disloyal acts in Germany. He had been warned by the people.

returned again yesterday to Westminster. Last night he was again waited upon by a delegation of citizens, who knocked at the door—he appeared, and was ordered to leave the place forthwith. He then fired upon them, wounding a young man named Henry Hill. Upon this, the enraged citizens followed him, and killed him upon the spot.

The news of the assassination of President

The E. glash residents closed their business and united with the Americans in observance of the funeral. On the 19th the local papers appeared in mourning, and everywhere the deepest sorrow was manifested.

Though the long line of citizens were anxious to view the remains, it was kept moving early this morning. It seemed unendingly long, and sometimes after daylight, was lengthened greatly, extending from Warren to Johnson streets, on Broadway, on the west side of the city hall, while there was another line of great length remaining through the streets on the east side of the hall.

1 o'clock.—The procession is now moving in the remains to the Hudson River railroad spot. It is one of the most imposing and impressive spectacles ever witnessed in New York, perhaps it was never equaled. There are so vehicles in the line of procession, and it moves with an awe-inspiring solemnity to the mournful music of the various bands. The military are out in full force, as also a large number of civic societies. One of the floats in front of the City Hall are this morning, causing great excitement.

est when the cry of fire was made. The presence of mind of an officer, who promptly tore down the burning drapery, a rush in the crowd, which would probably have caused loss of life. The crowd in Broadway was so great it was unnecessary to run chains around the place through which the procession was to pass into the Park. The number who viewed the remains, estimated at one hundred and twenty thousand.
